Did DC Shoes Steal the King of New York?

posted March 07, 2008 under skateboard industry news

This is only one side of a story that, up until today, I had heard nothing about. It may or may not be factual, but below is posted the text of an email I received from one Danny Parks, who claims that DC Shoes ripped off the name "King of New York" from an event that one Lou Perez started back in 1995 and which has been run every year. Imagine if DC Shoes suddenly came out with an event called "Tampa AM" but it wasn't held at the Skatepark of Tampa, it was held somewhere else in Tampa, at some skatepark DC Shoes built, and the event actually had no relation to the Tampa AM we all know and love. You'd get confused, right? And of course the Skatepark of Tampa would be a bit miffed, right? Well, that's what Danny claims is going on here. If it's true, then it stinks.

This is an absolute disgrace whta DC did, but youre right its just another example of "Big Fish-Little Fish".

On an aside, Im currently working with Gordy Winchester on this Onslawt project. I was hoping you'd be interested in joining the team and us ultimately becoming a sponsor in even bigger events. People will have no idea that your name is linked to Onslawt, you cna help us build the brand, and ultimately my friend BE the bigger fish. Trust us, this will be huge!

Let me know your thoughts.

Look forward to speaking with you.

In addition to the amazing athletes and entertainment at the King of New York event, a team of great sponsors helps elevate the King of New York to the kick-ass event that baby bean invited clothing and sneaker giant DC Shoes to join the King of New York event family of sponsors. We thought it would be a great fit (no pun intended) but unfortunately, DC Shoes completely ignored our invitation. So it hit us like a ton of bricks that DC Shoes had stolen the "King of New York" name and concept for its own event. Adding insult to injury, DC Shoes' "King of New York" event was its own creation! Now, Lou and I are all about live and let live, and we considered letting it go, but there's a problem with that: if we didn't stop DC Shoes from using the name again, riders and skaters, along with everyone else, would be confused. Which event was which? Who was sponsoring what? Which event is that great event that everyone loves? When this happens, everyone loses, most importantly all the people who have put their blood and sweat into the King of New York event since 1995. So baby bean asked DC Shoes to recognize our rights to the "King of New York" name and the name "King of New York" for events in the future. DC Shoes refused.
